the Yokohama community into a fever of excitement by beating to quarters on the Vladimir Monomach as the Agamemnon steamed into harbour, considerable stress was laid on the insult thus offered to the neutrality of a Japanese port. In reference to this point Admiral Crown was said to have expressed himself afterwards to the effect that he would not be inclined to pay much attention to the neutrality of any port unless that neutrality could be enforced Whether the Russian Admiral did actually so express himself does not appear to be clearly established, but there can be no doubt that the doctrine attributed to him is one that deserves the severest condemnation. Inactual war it may not always be practically possible for the combatante voluntarily to observenice distinctions as to the limits within which the enemy may beattacked, but a wilful disgarded of the neutrality of afriendly power would be a grave offence. Still, if neutral powers wish their neutrality to be strictly respected they must be prepared to enforce it; otherwise probably little regard would be paid to their wishes. Japan, however, is actually in a position sufficiently strong to command a due measure of respect on this point, for in the event of war between England and Russia her friendship would be of substantial value, and neither of the belligerents would willingly see that friendship estranged from themselves and transferred to the other. If Admiral Crown entertained any idea of deliberately violating the neutrality of a Japanese port he was exceedingly foolish, looking at the matter simply from a self-interested point of view. He was, of course, equaly wrong on gthical grounds. A paragraphic a Shangnai paper shows, however, how little regard is paid to sthical considerations when national interests are conterned. The Shang. hai Mercury attributes to Admiral Dowell the intention, should war occur, of committing an act which would constitute a much graver offence against the neutrality of China than Admiral, Chown's action at Yoko- fered by the authorities, and that a title may bama was against that of Japan, and writes of it in a spirit of commendation. Under the heading "In readiness for the prize" our contemporary says :-- "The question has been frequently asked of late in Shanghai why Vica-Admiral Dowell persists in keeping one of his small numboats in harbour, whilst on the other hand he seems to be stay drought and pestilence. anxious to concentrate all vessels available on points of strategical value. The answer has been whispered to us, and we think it to be not without foundation. It is known that there are two Russian tos ships in Hankow. In the event of war between Russin and England the Linust would at once be despatched to Hankow to hoist the Union Jack at the pask of the Russia Travitzka, which steamers would a valuable prize, considering that they Cardiganshire, from Hamburg, Antwerp and are very fast vessels." There can be London, sailed from Singapore for this port yesno possible foundation for the statement here made. That a man-of-war should of attack is a thing which may admit of some excuse on the score of hot-headedness or natural excitement, but to deliberstely go into a neutral port for the purpose deen dock to day, and the British barque Chanof soizing merchant vessels under an enemy's flag would constitute a grave international outrage which could admit of no excuse or palliation. The excuse put forth for this set of United States. violence was that according to Chinese opinion the architectural features of the foreign structure were of such a character as to prejudicially affect the favourable geomantic influences the hill was supposed to exercise. The representatives of the Chinese then instituted a suit in the Supreme Court for China and Japan to dispose of the chims of the Church Missionary Society. The judgment of the court was that one of the missionaries had acquired a life interest, but that otherwise the Society had no proprietary rights over the ground in dispute. As this tepure was practically of no value, the Society ahandoned the site in question for another in a different part of the city on what was not considered sacred soil. Mob violence was therefore effective in this case, and however much it is to be deprecated as a rule, and in this instance also, still it was impossible not to recognise the provocation the rioters had received. Missionaries would do well, in acquiring sites for their houses and or other places where their buildings are likely to constitute a perpetual offence to those

Sang " Willow, titwillow, titwillow !" And I said to him, " Dioky-bird, why do you sit "Singing 'Willow, titwillow; litwillow?" Is it a weakness of intellect, birdie?" I cried. "Or a rather tough worm in your little inside?" With a whake of his poor little head he replied,

"Oh willow, titwillow, titwillow!" He slappedat his chest as he art on that bough Singing "Willow, titwillow, titwillow !" And a cold perspiration beapangled his brow, Oh willow, titwillow, titwillow !

He sobbed and he sighed and a gargle he gave, Then he throw himself into the billowy wave. And an eolo arose from the suicide's grave,--"Oh willow, titwillow, titwillow!" Now I feel as sure as I'm sure that my name

Isn't willow, titwillow, titwillow! That 'twasblighted affection that made him exclaim. " Oh willow, titwillow, titwillow!" And if you remain callous and obdurate. I Shall perish as he did and you will know why Though Iprobably shall not exclaim as I die. "Oh willow, titwillow, titwillow 1" -From The Mikado, by GILBERT and SULLIVAN.
